Deborah Stallings Honored as one of the 2007 Maryland's Top 100 Women
Columbia entrepreneur selected for prestigious Top 100 Women Award

Columbia, MD – March 19, 2007. The Daily Record, a statewide source for business and legal news in Maryland, announced recently that Deborah Stallings, PHR, President and Chief Executive Officer of HR Anew in Columbia, has been selected as one of the 2007 Maryland's Top 100 Women. This program has recognized over 700 high-achieving Maryland women who are making an impact through their leadership, community service, and mentoring. Each year The Daily Record spotlights 100 women in a special publication that reaches over 27,000 readers and at an event at the Meyerhoff Symphony Hall that attracts 1,000 people.

A panel of distinguished judges chose Stallings as an entrepreneur who has demonstrated outstanding achievement in leadership, community service, and mentoring. "I am honored to receive this prestigious award, recognition, and endorsement from The Daily Record," says Stallings, who in early November received the Maryland's 2006 Top 100 Minority Business Enterprise Award by The Daily Record and The Governor's Office of Minority Affairs.
